

LA FOLLETTE GETS ULTRA PROGRESSIVE PLATFORM ADOPTED

STATE REPUBLICANS GIVE UNQUALIFIED ENDORSEMENT TO SENATOR WITH PROMISE OF NEW REFORMS.

PRAISE FOR M'GOVERN

Greater Progress Never Made Anywhere Than Under Is Administration, Is Statement—Stand for Income Tax.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Madison, Sept. 18.—In addition to being an unqualified endorsement of Robert M. La Follette in his national political activities the platform presented to the republican convention without question the most advanced step ever taken by any state upon questions of public interest. Acts of the state administration are pointed out in detail covering all legislative and administrative performances. The plan of the public works board in reference to the betterment of rural schools is adopted. The income tax policies of the administration are reaffirmed in no mistaken terms, but the party is pledged to protect private interests from exposure and a promise to simplify the law is made. Humanitarian Side. The platform fully attends to the humanitarian side of questions. Subjects of labor legislation, aid of mothers and dependent children, prison administration, and a signed declaration for a far-reaching plank relating to "blue sky" stock promotion is incorporated. This will be one of the new-found issues in Wisconsin progressivism. The waterpower question is handled in conformity to the decision of the supreme court, the party being pledged to amend the law to secure the protection of life and property, when damage results from the breaking of improperly constructed dams. Other plank seeks to prevent unfair selling of commodities at a lower rate in one section as discriminating against another section for the purpose of destroying competition. The party is pledged to enact legislation which will permit the placing of new party tickets upon the ballot. Home rule, the initiative, referendum and recall are provided for. Endorse La Follette Program. The Chicago platform introduced by Senator La Follette's friends is endorsed as is his plan to secure amendments to the federal constitution. The republican state platform, adopted today, refers at the outset to United States Senator La Follette as the leader in the onward movement in which Wisconsin has been the pioneer. "The principles for which he contended and established here," the document reads, "have now become the fundamental guarantee of representative government in all progressive states of the union." Puff for McGovern. Referring to Governor McGovern, a paragraph says in part, "No greater progress has ever been made in any state in the same time than during the administration of Governor Francis E. McGovern for improvement in the governmental machinery, for the enactment of popular will into law, and for social and economic advancement." Reference is then made to the carrying out of the provisions of the republican state platform of 1910, which is characterized as "without a precedent" and mentions the enactment of laws relating to "corrupt practices, presidential primaries, workmen's compensation and other measures. The plank referring to income tax says in part: "The income tax law enacted by the last legislature is a progressive measure based upon the sound economic principle that taxes shall be levied according to ability to pay and that net income is a better measure of such ability than the mere possession of such property. Its enactment at this time was prompted by the utter failure and injustice of personal property taxation." The subject of taxes is reviewed at great length, the plank ending as follows: "The law and its administration should be simplified to the end that the citizens may not be put to unnecessary trouble and expense. Other amendments may be necessary to perfect it and fully carry out its purpose of placing the tax burden equitably where it should be borne, but the law is right in principle and should be given a fair trial." Regards Water-power. A paragraph relating to waterpower reads: "The development of our state as well as the protection of our citizens makes imperative the immediate passage of a water-power bill which shall conserve our natural resources and compel the use and development for the welfare of all citizens under careful scientific administration control." Immediate enactment of effective legislation to establish minimum wage standard for women in the industries in which female labor predominates is advocated and a pledge is given for the abolition for the system of contract labor. Nothing on President. Home rule for cities, improvement of conditions in rural schools, passage of initiative, referendum and recall, constitutional amendments passed by the last session of the legislature are also pledged. In conclusion endorsement is given the bill now before congress providing for appeals from state courts to the supreme court of the United States where state courts have declared state laws unconstitutional upon the ground that they violate the federal constitution.

Immediately the oppositionists rushed at the minister, striking him with their fists until he fell to the floor. After some struggling the minister was rescued by friends. Mrs. La Follette urged that every man record his judgment on the question whether he believed in it or not. "It is a strong factor in the home life. THIRD PARTY PLANKS FAVOR STEEL TRUST IS WILSON'S CHARGE

Democratic Candidate Shows How Steel Corporation Would Benefit by Bull Moose Trust Program. [BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Minneapolis, Minn., Sept. 18.—How the United States steel corporation "incidentally would benefit" by the plank in the third party platform proposing regulation of trusts by a federal commission, was revealed by Governor Woodrow Wilson in his speeches as he passed from Sioux City to Minneapolis and St. Paul today. It was at Sioux Falls, S. Dakota, that the democratic nominee first drew attention to the origin of the third party plank for handling the trust problem. Gary and Perkins. "Where was the method now proposed of regulating the trusts suggested?" asked the governor. "It was suggested in the inquiry by the house of representatives into the steel trust and it was suggested by Mr. Gary and Mr. George W. Perkins. They have thought this thing out. I am not interested to question their motives. It may be for all I know that they think and honestly think that that is the way to safeguard the business of this country. "But whatever they think, they they know that it will save the United States steel corporation from the necessity of doing its business better than its competitors. For if you will look into the statistics of the business of the United States steel corporation you will find that wherever they have competition the amount of the product to which they control is decreasing not increasing; in other words that they are less efficient than their competitors and their control of the product is increasing only in those branches of the business where by purchase and otherwise they have a practical monopoly. Word to Working Men. "Moreover I have this to say to the working men. Carry out the plan of Mr. Gary and Mr. Perkins and you will have given a control in the market for labor which will suit these gentlemen perfectly. They don't want competitors to come into the market for labor because new competitors for labor will mean new wages and new wage scales and these are the very men and almost the only men who have successfully opposed union labor in the United States and shut it out of their shops and bribed it to be content to be shut out by all sorts of benevolent schemes of profit sharing and otherwise which a man would forfeit if he left the shops or joined a union." Was a Busy Day. A busy day in the Twin Cities was the outlook for Gov. Woodrow Wilson, democratic presidential candidate when he arrived in Minneapolis early this morning, from Sioux City, Iowa, and Sioux Falls, South Dakota, where he made addresses yesterday. After the address he attended a private luncheon and conference with Minnesota party leaders and then left for St. Paul where he makes the principal address in the Twin Cities at the St. Paul auditorium tonight. RECOMMENDS BUYING MOTOR FIRE PATROL

Chief of Fire Department Advocates Purchase of Piece of Apparatus in Report.

Purchase by the city of a motor propelled piece of fire apparatus for No. 2 fire station to be substituted for the two horse drawn vehicles now in use there is recommended by Chief of Fire Department H. C. Kline in his last quarterly report, submitted to the City Council at its meeting yesterday. He endorses the suggestion of the Fire Police to that effect made in a communication to the Council. The Fire Police propose to sell their patrol wagon and, turn it in toward the purchase of a motor propelled one. They do not state in their communication the exact nature of the apparatus desired, but it is understood that a combination, patrol, hose wagon, and chemical extinguisher is favored. The report of Chief Kline in full is as follows:

To the Mayor and Councilmen of the City of Janesville, Wisconsin.

Gentlemen:—I herewith submit my quarterly report, as Chief Engineer of the Fire Department. Since my last quarterly report our city has been very fortunate in the way of fires. No loss of any consequence has been recorded.

Since January of the present year the department has responded to fifty-one (51) alarms of fires, of which the greater number were "stills."

One new horse was purchased about two months ago, and is now being used on the hose wagon. This horse has been found good in the service. One more must be purchased for use on the hook and ladder outfit, and the Chief Engineer is at this time on the "look out" for a suitable one. All of our fire wagons should be touched up with paint and then varnished.

In my last report to the council I called attention to the fact that we had 500 feet of fire hose that could not be used under high pressure.

Since that time the Mayor and the Chief Engineer, acting under orders of the Mayor, have tried to get the company that furnished this hose about one year ago to "make good." Notwithstanding the fact that I called on this company in their Chicago office about three months ago and explained to them our trouble about this hose, and they agreed to me to "make good." Up to this time nothing has been done in this matter.

I therefore would respectfully suggest that our city attorney start suit against this hose company.

I will respectfully recommend that some action be taken that will lead to placing steamer connections on fire hydrants, in all high valued districts. On July 30th, Mr. Charles Schultz, a full paid man was injured while working about the fire station. I will recommend that his doctor bills be paid by the city.

With the approach of cold weather it will be necessary that 1000 feet of fire hose be purchased. I therefore recommend that the same be purchased.

Your Honorable body has received a communication from the Janesville Fire Police Company, suggesting that automobile apparatus be placed in service at No. 2 fire station in place of the two horse drawn vehicles. Believing that it will be a good business proposition to install this motor apparatus, and that it would increase the efficiency of the fire department, I will respectfully recommend that the terms of the Fire Police Company be accepted and that motor propelled apparatus be purchased for this fire station.

Respectfully submitted,
H. C. Kline,
Chief Engineer.

Affidavit Case Dismissed.
On April 26 last, a warrant was sworn out against Richard Affeldt charging him with procuring intoxicating liquor for Oscar Voight, a prohibited person. Yesterday Affeldt was apprehended and placed in the lockup for trial. When the case was called at two o'clock in the afternoon in Justice J. A. Smith's court, the evidence against the accused was not sufficient to proceed further in the action and the case was dismissed.

ARCHBISHOP'S LETTER WAS RECEIVED HERE

Instructions As To School Attendance Read In Janesville Roman Catholic Churches Week Ago.

The letter of Archbishop Messmer of Milwaukee enjoining Roman Catholic parents to send their children to the Catholic parochial schools whenever possible was received and read in the Janesville Catholic churches a week ago last Sunday according to local priests. They state that the letter has been misinterpreted by the public press and impressions of the archbishop's motives and intentions are given that are far from correct.

The account in a Chicago paper this morning is instanced as particularly misleading. Catholic parents sending their children to the common schools are not generally threatened with excommunication. The archbishop's letter is couched in general terms and though it is understood that circumstances alter cases, he could not possibly specify every exception that might arise. Cognizance is taken of the fact that in some cities the Catholic schools do not carry their pupils up to the eighth grade, nor is a Catholic academy or high school provided. In such instances parents have a right to send their children to the public schools after they finish the parochial school. Neither is there objection to Catholic children attending public schools in the country where it is impossible to attend one of their church schools.

The motive of the archbishop is said to be in part, a desire to prevent parents from removing children from the parochial schools before they have finished the course provided, and to put them to work in factories. This is one way in which the church is recognizing and attempting to restrict the evil of child labor.

The letter of the prebushin in part is as follows:

"Rev. Dear Sir: It is a deplorable fact that a large number of Catholic parents take their children from the Catholic school as soon as these children have made their first communion. In view of the repeated and earnest admonitions of the highest authorities in the church on the grave duty of parents to leave their children under Catholic educational influence, that is, in Catholic schools as long as possible, it is almost impossible to understand the sinful levity of such parents and their open defiance of the laws of the church. Their action appears still more criminal when earnest Christian believers outside of the Catholic church all over the United States begin to call loudly for religious and moral instruction in the public schools as the only means of counteracting the growing loss of positive religion and with it, as a necessary consequence, the loss of moral principles and habits among the youth of the country. How can Catholic parents, in the face of all this, find any good excuse before God and conscience for taking their children from the Catholic school and thus depriving them of the direct and strong influence of Christian faith and grace which alone can form them into good Christians and good citizens alike. There is absolutely no excuse, except where parents are deprived of the opportunity and blessing of a Catholic school or where the children have already passed through all the grades of the Catholic school and wish to continue further studies. The crazy notion of some parents that their American citizenship demands to have their children attend the public school, as if our Catholic schools were not American or the positively anti-Christian idea that the minds and hearts of their children will profit ever so much more by going to the public school although the loss of fuller and deeper religious training are most assuredly no excuses whatever."

Hence, in order that the priests of the diocese as well as Catholic parents may clearly know their duties, we ordain as follows:

"1. In regard to sending Catholic children to Catholic schools the laws of the third plenary council of Baltimore must be fully observed. Exceptions can be allowed only, as there stated, by episcopal authority."

"2. Catholic parents are bound to send their children who have made their first holy communion to the Catholic school until these children have passed through all the grades of the school, unless they are sent to a Catholic college or academy."

"3. Catholic parents disobeying these rules, when not properly excused by the bishop, commit a grievous sin and can not receive the sacraments of the church."

"4. Catholic children going to public schools will not be admitted to first holy communion and holy confirmation, unless they have regularly attended the preparatory instructions for these sacraments and passed a satisfactory examination in catechism."

"5. As regards holy confirmation the rule of this archdiocese demands that no child under 12 years of age be admitted."

Constipation and Catarrh

You are constipated. You have taken laxatives a great many years. You have tried to select a diet that would keep your bowels regular. In this you have failed and were obliged to go back to your laxative again. This, I say, has been going on many years, chronic catarrh.

You also have a slight catarrh in the head and throat. You never imagined that the catarrh had anything to do with the constipation. Suppose I were to tell you that as long as you have that catarrh you will never get better of your constipation. Would you believe me? Well, whether you would believe me or not, it is the truth.

For many years I have been wrestling with the problem of furnishing the public an internal catarrh remedy. Peruna has been the remedy that I have devised and it has certainly relieved many thousands of people, yet hundreds of thousands of people, of chronic catarrh.

Constipation was my chief difficulty in treating these cases. I often felt that it would be better if a laxative element were added to Peruna. I feared to do so, however, first because of the number of cathartic patients who needed no laxative, and second I was afraid of making such a radical change in a remedy that was already doing so well. Thus it was that I continued to prescribe with the Peruna a bottle of Manalin to those who needed a laxative. At last, under circumstances explained in my booklet, I was constrained to add the laxative element to Peruna. This constitutes what is now known as the revised Peruna.

Now those who take Peruna will, first, find themselves promptly relieved of their constipation. Second, the catarrh will gradually disappear. And once the catarrh is cured the constipation leaves permanently. Then if you follow the advice given in my book you will never have to take pills any more. Cathartics and laxatives you can ignore. You will be permanently relieved of both your catarrh and the constipation.

Peruna is for sale at all drug stores. SPECIAL NOTICE—Many persons are making inquiries for the old-time Peruna. To such would say, this formula is now put out under the name of KA-TAR-NO, manufactured by KA-TAR-NO Company, Columbus, Ohio. Write them and they will be pleased to send you a free booklet.

may be caught back of the goal line providing it does not go over ten yards back, and still be counted as a touchdown. The field which was called a checkerboard will assume the old name of gridiron hereafter. The intermission has been changed, but only between quarters. Between the first and second and third and fourth quarters the time has been changed from two minutes intermission to one minute.

The office of Field Judge has been dispensed with. But three officials will be used, they being the Referee, Umpire and the Linesman. The outside kick, which caused so much trouble in past years has been abolished. One faction insists that the new rules mean nothing else but a return to the old line-plunging type of game. Another faction contends that the new rules will tend to develop the running game and make the play more open. Only the season itself and the new methods will prove which theory is correct. Fast teams will be necessary to make headway this season, as was needed last year, and it is thought mass plays will be used again this year as they were used several years ago.

FOOTBALL PLAYERS CONTINUE PRACTICE

Coach Curtis Rounding High School Eleven Into Shape—Holds Special Classes For Candidates.

Practically the same lineup was on the field at last night's practice of the high school eleven. New signals were given, and light scrimmage was held. Mehr was placed at quarterback part of the time, and Stewart worked the signals at the pivot position the remainder of the time. About the same number were on hand, twenty-five men reporting for practice.

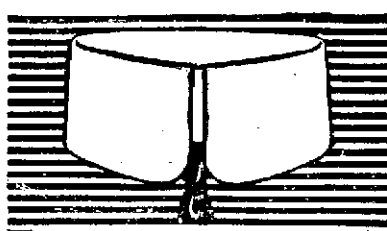

One fact of interest to the local followers is that Beloit high school are trying to produce a team with which to clean up the locals. No games have yet been arranged, but if there is, Janesville will be on hand to repeat the stunt of last year, thereby capturing two victories. There are but eight more practices before the first game, and in order to have the team know the signals well, Coach Curtis is laying out the plays on blackboard and will hold classes in football. This will give the team a good knowledge of the plays and will show them the various formations and how to run them.

WEATHER FORECAST.

OUT OF THE ORDINARY.
For the first time in the history of the nation a presidential campaign has failed to upset business. But for the noise of the Bull Moose, the people generally would not know that a campaign was on.

This is as it should be. The people have decided that whatever may be the outcome, the business of the country is of first importance, and so the most of them are attending strictly to their own affairs, while the politicians are running the political game to suit themselves.

The long era of prosperity which has blessed the nation, promises to be prolonged, and nature combines with common sense to aid in the work. The abundant harvest means more than prosperity to the farmer, because this is first an agricultural country, and when success rewards the farmer it means success in all other channels. An exchange has this to say of conditions and the outlook:

"The nearer we come to the completion of the harvest, the more optimistic business sentiment becomes. Every indication now is for an agricultural wealth eclipsing anything in our history. Moreover, the prices for our products are relatively high by reason of a great world demand."

"This year the farmers will be prosperous, which means that the country will be prosperous. All this has come about after a long period of liquidation and depression, when stocks of merchandise have been allowed to run down to the lowest limit."

"Today consumption has caught up with production. We are working all the time more nearly to capacity, and our capacity has been enormously increased. The business world is not only much busier, but its work is showing larger profits."

"There is still more or less discontent among labor, but even this is being quietly readjusted, because of the larger profits."

"All statistics coming to hand tell of the betterment under way. Clearing house exchanges are increasing, and railroad earnings are swelling. Money is in demand and borrowers can afford to pay higher rates for the reason that they see a profit in its employment."

"Altogether, the outlook is extremely promising—so promising that even the fact that we are in a presidential year does not seriously menace it."

FRATERNAL INSURANCE.

The officers of the "Modern Woodman" decided very wisely, a few months ago, that if the order continued to exist, for any great length of time, the members must contribute more freely to its support, and so the rates were advanced to meet the emergency.

This led to war in the camp on the part of men who had been promised protection at a fraction of what it cost to produce it, and a fight is now being made in the courts to restrain the order from enforcing the new rates.

The Modern Woodman has several hundred million liabilities, with practically no assets, and like all other fraternal insurance organizations, which attempt to furnish something for nothing, is up against the same propositions that all of them face before they pass the half century mark.

The theory of this kind of insurance may seem all right, but the principle is all wrong, and many state legislatures have passed laws to protect the people against themselves, for the scheme is very popular, inasmuch as it promises something for nothing.

The history of this class of companies is failure and the worst feature of it is that a lot of victims have passed the insurance age and are left without protection. If the Woodman expect to survive they will find that the new rates are necessary for temporary relief, and that heavy advances will be required to meet maturing obligations as the death rate increases.

The Madison love-feast is not entirely harmonious, and the senator who is running it has discovered that some of his satellites are not as loyal as they might be. McGovern has his friends, and some of the Wisconsin progressives are fair-minded enough to think that the national administration should be endorsed, all of which is depressing to the master of ceremonies. There are a number of reform laws which need attention, and one of them is the platform proposition, which is just now making the state ridiculous.

W. T. La Follette of Madison, a real estate dealer, who makes a specialty of Georgia lands, is conducting a press bureau in the interests of Woodrow Wilson and the national democratic party. He has the audacity to ask the republican papers of the state to publish a two-column article, which is largely devoted to lauding the New Jersey governor and incidentally scolding the independent voter who supported Judge Karel for governor. W. T. La Follette is said to be a relative of the senator.

Industrial peace, shorter hours for labor, wages fixed by law, and a special session of congress to hasten the millennium, are some of the attractions offered by the Bull Moose leader, as he swings around the circle on his spectacular advertising tour. It looks well on paper, and sounds well from the rear platform of a campaign train, but there are some propositions that are beyond regulation by law.

The mail order house of Sears, Roebuck & Co. is building immense warehouses in Kansas City and Dallas, Texas, to aid in distribution of goods. It is estimated that the volume of business will reach two hundred million dollars, within a few years. This is the concern that is clamoring for the parcels post.

Heart to Heart Talks.

By EDWIN A. NYE.

GADABOUTS.

I think I know what you think. You think because of the title of this talk I am about to say something concerning that class of women who are forever on the go, to the loss of their families and for their own amusement.

They are bad enough. But there are worse gadabouts. I refer to gadabout thoughts which go here and there without connection or definite purpose.

What could you expect of a ship that would sail now ahead and now sidewise and now in a circle and in every direction of the compass regardless of destiny?

Gadabout ships of that sort soon are drifting derelicts.

Some people's thinking is of that indefinite character. They are as changeable as the drifting vessel. As sailors say, they are forever "yawing."

Their thoughts are gadabout thoughts.

It is all right to think at times along general lines for the broadening and cultural effects such thinking affords, but to get anywhere and to do anything one's thinking must be definite and purposeful.

The gadabout thoughts may do for the passenger who whiles away his time on deck, but the steersman cannot indulge them.

Vacillation spells failure. Spasmodic, disconnected thinking goes gadding to nowhere.

Vagrant thoughts make vagrant men.

The man who has failed has done about as much thinking as he who succeeds, but it has been fragmentary, impulsive, wayward. His thinking has not been in a straight line.

Concentrate!

Know what you want, decide on your course and then, with fixed determination, converge your thoughts on a definite accomplishment.

Centralize your thoughts!

Note that boy experimenting with a burning glass. The sun is hot, but its dispersed beams will not set fire to combustibles. The boy focuses the rays and turns the congregated heat upon one spot. Lo, the flame!

Eschew gadabout thoughts.

Focus them on one spot.

Good Evening! Here's a Story and a Moral:

An immigrant who had never seen a mule landed in this country and beheld a farmer leading one. "What's that?" asked the immigrant. "A mule" quoth the farmer. "How do you raise them?" "Hatch them from pumpkins."

The immigrant stealing a pumpkin from a nearby field, took it into the woods and sat on it for weeks, hoping for a fine large mule. Week after week went by and no mule. At last, in disgust, he hurled the pumpkin down until it struck a stump and smashed to smithereens, and from behind the stump dashed a frightened rabbit.

"Come back here," yelled the immigrant, "I'm your father!" It is well not to count your chickens before they're hatched.

VENIREMEN DRAWN FOR OCTOBER TERM

VENIREMEN DRAWN
List of Thirty-Six Men Announced for Circuit Court Jury Service If Needed.

Veniremen for the October term of the circuit court were drawn today by Jury Commissioners, George D. McKay of Janesville, E. P. Hanson of Beloit, and Robert Moore, in the office of Clerk of the Court Jesse Earle. The list of thirty-six names was drawn from a list of two hundred and fifty names that the commissioners had prepared. The veniremen selected for the jury trials to come before the next term of court are: E. B. Kneff, Edgerton; D. J. Luby, Fourth Ward, Janesville; Fred Dockhorn, Bradford; Thomas Spohn, Fourth Ward, Janesville; W. N. Moore, Second Ward, Janesville; Peter Barrett, Center; M. M. Murray, Clinton village; E. J. Ralston, Fifth Ward, Beloit; Frank Pearson, Fulton; E. D. Vincent, Milton; Stokely Hutchins, Third Ward, Janesville; J. C. Elcott, Second Ward, Beloit; Ray Bartlett, Newark; James Porter, Porter; E. C. Hopkins, Edgerton; P. T. Nichols, First Ward, Beloit; H. B. Walker, Fourth Ward, Janesville; Frank Davis, Center; C. E. Andrews, Third Ward, Beloit; John Campion, Harmony; Edw. Lawrence, Edgerton; Frank Pierson, Second Ward, Janesville; Ellsworth Caldo, Johnsonville; E. B. Gates, Fifth Ward, Beloit; Henry Olson, Fourth Ward, Beloit; Charles Oliver, Fourth Ward, Beloit; J. P. Smiley, Plymouth; Samuel Goss, Fifth Ward, Beloit; M. E. Stebbins, Newark.

There is a possibility that the October term of court may be postponed until November. A petition to have Judge Grimm postpone the trial of jury cases before the court until the second Monday in November, No. 18, is being circulated among the members of the Rock county bar, and if enough names are secured, it is understood, the judge has signified his willingness to take adjournment. The reason given for the petition is that the trial of jury cases in October would be inconvenient because of the nearness of the fall election, and because it would be difficult for rural residents to come into the city, as they would then be busiest with their fall work.

SELF-RIGHTEOUSNESS REFUGE OF SINNERS

Evangelist Greene Preaches Powerful Sermon on Hindrances to Salvation.

"Self-righteousness and pride are keeping many Janesville people from being saved," said the Rev. Greene in his sermon at the auditorium last night. "A great many men seek to be saved. They put on their best, and expect the great Heavenly Father to accept them because they are handsome and well-dressed, or popular, and stand well in society circles. They are like Naaman the leper, who came to Elisha with horses and chariot, six hundred pieces of gold, a change of raiment, and a letter of introduction. He expected the prophet to bow in deference to him, and to be waited upon, but he was compelled to bathe in the Jordan to heal his leprosy."

The Rev. Greene took his text from II. Kings, Chapter 5, and gave a very striking picture of the character typified in the leper Naaman. He pleaded for humility and the acceptance of the "salvation which Jesus Christ offers freely to all who repent and believe, accepting him as a personal savior." Mr. Clark sang two well appreciated solos. Another meeting will be held at the auditorium this evening.

Lowell, Rhineclander, A. W. Danborn, Ashland.

Burke Offers Resolution.

Among the resolutions referred to the committee on resolutions was the following from Senator Timothy Burke:

"For more than half a century, with the exception of a few brief intervals, the affairs of the nation have been successfully conducted through the medium of the great republican party whose record as a whole has been one of honor to itself and to the people whose affairs have been entrusted to its care.

"The people through the republican party have successfully solved all the great national problems in the past and can be safely entrusted to handle the great problems which now are before the American people.

"We believe that a broader and more comprehensive plan for the successful solution of the great political industrial and economic questions affecting our national life was embodied in the plank submitted by Senator La Follette at the last republican national convention.

"We recognize the fact, however, that the ends to be attained along the lines outlined in the manner recommended by our senior senator can be successfully accomplished through the medium of the republican party.

"We therefore pledge our support to the nominees of the republican national convention. William Howard Taft for president and James S. Sherman for vice president, and to the platform adopted by said party in convention assembled, together with the amendments and qualifications as set forth in the La Follette resolutions submitted to the national convention."

May Not Be Adopted.

Members of the committee have promised Senator Burke that the resolution will not be smothered in the committee room, but will be reported out. If so, it will be lost in the convention, as the candidates are averse to taking any stand on the national ticket.

Senator Burke also handed in two other resolutions, one calling for a minimum wage scale for railway employees and the other demanding the regulation of cold storage warehouses in the interest of the farmer and consumer.

MIDST OF DISROBING ACT.

Antics of Cemented Stoughton Man on Milwaukee Street Bridge

Interrupted by Police.

Pedestrians crossing Milwaukee Street bridge yesterday afternoon, were entertained for a time by the antics of a demented man from Stoughton who stopped automobiles, stepped on carriages as they passed and persisted in speaking to all who approached him, but when he began to disrobe, presumably for a high dive performance, he was hustled into a nearby store and held there until the police came for him. Two of his friends called for him at the station later in the afternoon and explained that the man was unbalanced. They were permitted to take him home.

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

WHEN SHALL WE KISS?

A MOTHER has written to ask me to say something on the harmfulness of kissing games at young people's parties.

Delighted.

I didn't realize that forfeits such as measuring so many yards of ribbon, and picking cherries, and games like "On the Green Car" and "clap-and-clap-out" and the most flagrant of all "post-office" were still in vogue at young people's parties.

But if they are I am certainly delighted to engage in any crusade against them.

But in one point I disagree with my correspondent. She thinks that the little girl of, say, six or eight or ten should be forbidden to kiss her little boy friends on the ground of morality.

If I had a little girl of that age I shouldn't want to awaken sex consciousness in her by such a prohibition. I should want her to feel exactly the same towards her little boy friends as towards the girls.

There is a little story in one of our periodicals which I want to quote here because it illustrates my feelings on this subject so aptly.

A little girl had been left in the nursery by herself and her brother arrived to find the door closed. The following conversation took place:

"I want to turn in, Cissie."

"You want to turn in, Tom?"

"Why not?"

"Cause I'm in my nightie gown and nurse says little boys mustn't see little girls in their nightie gowns."

After an astonished and reflective silence on Tom's side of the door, the miniature Eve announced triumphantly, "You can turn in now, Tom. I tooked it off!"

That's just the kind of a little girl I'd like to have. And I'd try my best to prolong that innocence as long as possible.

My objection to kissing games among little children would be founded simply on my objection to all promiscuous kissing as unhygienic and as a cheapening of something which should be a sign of unusual affection.

As I have said before in these columns, I don't like promiscuous kissing, even among girls. I think the handshake is a much better form of greeting. The kiss should mean something more than that.

But when it's a question of kissing games among young people in their teens and twenties, there isn't anything you can say against this practice that I won't agree to.

A kiss—especially on the lips—should be a seal of affection. It should mean, "I love you."

When it is used lightly as a form of amusement in kissing games, or a form of sensual pleasure in the game of hearts, it is cruelly cheapened.

The girl who has given such kisses has lost something she can never get back.

I am sorry for her.

German men who would be willing to subsist every day in the year on an expense of 25 cents for food and do the family cooking. A German likes good food as well as an American. Germans are celebrated epicureans, willing to spend more on their stomachs than on their backs, in practically every instance, for they know that sturdy bodies and splendid brains are the result of plenty of food and good cooking.

PORK DISHES.

Pork is not an aristocratic meat, although it is the basis of an enormous industry. Ham and bacon are not without honor, but there are few cook books that mention the cooking of fresh pork, and rarely the preparation of salt pork, which is mainly used with baked beans. Cold roast pork is as appetizing as any meat, and makes a most acceptable salad combined with celery, as one does in preparing chicken salad.

It is only those who are privileged to raise and fatten their own pork who fully enjoy it. Country life and country occupations furnish the right conditions for eating pork. Since the rise in the price of pork it has been regarded with greater esteem.

The most important thing to be remembered in the cooking of pork is that it should be thoroughly done, never served rare.

Chopped salt pork, a cupful, added to a homely fruit cake using dried apple and molasses, makes a cake fit for any epicure.

Spare ribs with sour kraut is another homely but well-liked dish of our grandmother's.

Bacon wrapped around an oyster and skewered with a toothpick, then broiled or baked in a hot oven is another ladylike dainty.

A stuffed sparerib may be new to some. Try, if possible, to buy one that has a little meat left on the bones; fill with a stuffing well seasoned with onion or sage and put on top another sparerib. Place in a pan with a half cup of boiling water and roast an hour, basting often. The potatoes may be peeled and baked around the sparerib.

Pork in Paper Bag.—Cut up cold roast meat in slices, add a finely-chopped onion, a little tomato catsup and a bay leaf, salt and pepper. Put into a buttered bag and bake on the rack in a hot oven for ten minutes. Serve in the bag so that the dish may be piping hot.

Pork chops to be juicy and at the same time well cooked, should be put to cook in a very little water, letting it all boil away, then season and brown as usual.

DOING WITHOUT MEAT.

"I have gone two or three months at a time without eating any meat," says a reader, and thought I felt the better for it, but Dr. T. J. says that a small amount of meat is desirable, in fact a necessity. This is not borne out by the experience of those who have made a fair test of it. I have known many who stopped the use of meat for a short time and thought they were the worse for the change, but I have never known any one who discontinued the use of flesh for a year who questioned the benefit derived, and in this number I include myself. Every argument in favor of meat-eating can be satisfactorily answered, and all tests prove that greater physical endurance can be maintained on a non-flesh diet. I cannot answer for others, but I can say for myself that I have not tasted flesh meat for nearly ten years.

HOUSEHOLD TALKS

Henrietta D. Grauel

The coconut is a tropical fruit that we find use for in its fresh or dehydrated form all through the year.

A delicious beverage is made from the milk of the fresh nut that the West Indians claim is wonderfully refreshing. After the liquor is drawn off it is mixed with the beaten yolk of an egg and thoroughly chilled, while the white of the egg is whipped to a froth. The juice and grated rind of an orange are added with some grated nutmeg, and a little sugar, and the whole mixture whisked with a beater, strained, and served immediately.

The freshly grated meat of the coconut is sweeter and finer than that packed in boxes and is preferred when it is to be had, but the commercial article is now prepared so that the natural moisture is preserved along with much of the natural aroma and taste.

More coconut is used for cakes and puddings than for anything else, though prominent physicians are declaring the meat to be extremely nutritious and rich in tissue building properties.

A whipped cream coconut cake has recently appeared on the counters of the best caterers, and its beauty and delicacy have aroused considerable comment as it has not been an easy matter to make whipped cream hold its form. A little gelatin is added to give the needed firmness. It is made as follows:

Beat heavy sweet cream until it is stiff, then add the dissolved gelatin, different makes require different quantities, a teaspoonful to a pint of cream is unusually enough. Flavor with vanilla and add sugar and coconut to suit the taste and spread lightly on the cake.

An excellent sauce for puddings and cake and cereal dishes is made with a cup of grated coconut, one cup of hot water; let this stand until cool. In another basin mix one tablespoon of butter with half a cup of sugar, and the beaten yolk of one egg and lastly the moistened coconut.

At Hackensack, New York, there is a factory that produces twenty-five thousand pounds of coconut butter every day in the year. Not the sort of cocoa-butter barbers use but a table butter and splendidly adapted for cooking purposes, far better than oleomargarine and, unlike compound butters, absolutely pure and wholesome.

American people are slow to sever their allegiance to the cow, so most of the output is sent to the Philippines, England and France, though many of our hospitals are using it. The manufacturers of the new product say they are fighting the Elgin butter board and the beef trusts, but they transplanted twenty thousand coconut trees last season that will soon be bearing, and then the price of butter, they say, will fall.

The only trouble with the coconut is its richness; the resolution to eat just a little is soon forgotten, or the "little" is eaten at the close of a hearty meal when the digestive powers are already overtaxed, and the lover of the fruit experiences some inconvenience which he blames on the nut. When it is finally understood that it is a factor in reducing the high cost of living it will be treated with more respect and given its rightful place on the bill of fare.

Heart and Home Problems

MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON

Dear Mrs. Thompson—(1) I have a blue silk muslin dress my auntie sent me. How should I wear it made for my first party dress? (2) How must I have my hair fixed? (3) How can I tell a nice boy when I first meet him?

WILLIE MAE.

(1) A pretty style for a young girl is the surplice waist falling low over the shoulders and a slightly full skirt reaching two or three inches above her ankle. If you wish to be quite stylish, you might have a panier drape on the skirt. Have the sleeves short, edge the surplice and drape with narrow white lace or, if you have time, embroider the edges or sew on a little pattern of beads.

(2) Wear your hair very simply waved over the ears and coiled at the back. The around your head a wide soft blue ribbon with a large bow on top or at any angle that is most becoming. (3) By the way he considers your comforts and feelings.

Dear Mrs. Thompson—Why is it that there are so many nice gentlemen and ladies each longing to meet a congenial friend of the opposite sex, but who have no opportunity of meeting and becoming acquainted and in consequence remain lonely until some of them become bitter, others doubtful?

PUZZLED.

I wish I knew the answer. It often seems that the nicest people, who would make the best husbands and wives, are unable to meet desirable members of the opposite sex. Our society is to blame. Men flock together in their interests and women flock apart in their own affairs and there seems to be no intermediate meeting ground.

Dear Mrs. Thompson—Will you please tell me at what meals bread and butter plates are used?

HOUSEKEEPER.

At dinner, placed near the dinner plates.

Dear Mrs. Thompson—While downtown shopping a lady friend I met a certain gentleman with whom I am very good friends. He is very handsome. I wished him to make a favorable impression upon my friend, but he was wearing a most unbecoming felt hat with a high crown. It made him appear hopelessly common.

We are not on a footing which would permit me to mention this to him in person. Would it be wrong for me to write him an anonymous letter, explaining, in a friendly way, that style of hat is not at all the sort for him to wear?

IMA J.

I know just how you feel. Sometimes the best men in the world are indifferent to the appearance they make, the embarrassment or exasperation of their women friends. I do not write him an anonymous letter, however. It would hurt him and

DINNER STORIES

Whilst out for a walk with her little niece, auntie had the misfortune to trip the lace on her skirt as she crossed a stile.

"Ethel," remarked auntie, "I can't mend the lace now, so would you mind stooping down and carefully tearing off the piece that is hanging loose?"

Ethel was quite willing and eager to please, and duly commenced her task. For several minutes there was a sound of tearing, really much more tearing than was necessary to remove a small length of broken lace.

"Haven't you finished yet?" asked auntie eventually.

"Yes," replied the little girl, rising wearily. "I was taking it all off. I wanted enough for my doll's skirt while I was about it, and the little bit you tore wasn't enough."

A Scotch gamekeeper who had been left in charge of an estate was being questioned by an English visitor: "Are there many deer on the place?" "Hundreds, sir," "Many hares?" "Thousands, sir," "Well, now are there many gorillas?" asked the Englishman, satirically. For a moment the gamekeeper hesitated, then he replied, "Well, sir, they—they come like yersel', just noo and then."

Tom Tracy was always presented at the Democratic national convention when it met in Baltimore. He was personally known to every delegation. For the benefit of such as live beyond the alarms of political goings-on it is hereby made known that Tom Tracy is an open-faced man who believes in doing just as much good to anybody as he would like anybody to do to him. What few wrinkles there are in his face are made by smiles.

Tom was the commodore of a fleet of houseboats that sailed from New York to Baltimore. The fleet went by way of the canals and loitered en voyage. It was not the intention to make any records.

The commodore's idea was to give all on board the sort of time they would talk about for days to come, when all the conventional confusion was over.

Some of the invited were high-brows, and to them Tom said in his invitations: "There are 10,000 gallons of spring water on board." If Tom had said that the fleet carried a hundred barrels of Kentucky or Maryland joy-drops no explanations would have been necessary. But a southern senator, alarmed at the prospect, inquired the object of such a quantity of prohibition samples. Said Commodore Tom:

"It is three days' voyage from New York to Baltimore, and I thought maybe some of the guests might want to launder their shirts. If you expect to wear one shirt all the time you are gone of course you won't be interested in the cargo."

My Own Secrets for Self-Made Beauty

The Most Captivating Actress on the American Stage and Most Famous Self-Made Beauty, Reveals Some of Her Own Beauty Secrets.

By Valeska Suratt.

Falling hair is one of the greatest diseases of womanhood. Miss Suratt gives a means of checking it completely. It must be forgotten that Miss Suratt is the only woman on the American stage who never wears a wig, and that her wealth of hair is the result of her own method.

It is almost impossible to have a healthy head of hair without giving it proper care as it is to have bodily health and abuse the system.

A hair tonic worth using at all is worth using all the time. It means life and nourishment to hair almost as food is to the body.

Your comb will never have on it a tangled mass of dead, sick hair, and your hair will grow in great profusion if you will make up your mind to use the following formula and absolutely discard everything else you may be using as a hair treatment.

Mix a half pint of alcohol with half a pint of water, then add one ounce of bergamot. Shake thoroughly, and it will then be ready to use. If you prefer, you can use imported bay rum instead of the water and alcohol.

This formula should be applied very freely on the scalp after brushing the scalp generously for a few minutes all over. Rub the tonic thoroughly into the scalp with the finger tips.

MARTHA H.—Yes, you can surely get rid of blackheads. They are purely local conditions. I have never found anything that would rid the skin of blackheads, except the formula I give you here. First, wash the face with hot water and soap. Then sprinkle some nioxin generously upon a sponge made wet with hot water. Then rub well for a few minutes on the parts of the skin which are affected with blackheads. This done, bathe the face with warm water and dry. Then apply some of the lotion given to "Wondering." The nioxin will cost you not to exceed fifty cents at any drugist.

WONDERING—The skin-bleach you mention is strictly injurious. It is no wonder your skin has become coarse. No better skin whitener exists than the formula I give you here. It removes freckles, red spots and blemishes, and like magic and at the same time makes the skin delightfully soft, pink and smooth. Just like a baby's.

Let half a pint of water come almost to a boil. Add two tablespoonfuls of glycerine. Keep stirring while adding one ounce of zinc oxide until it is all dissolved. Then let it cool. If the cream is too thick to pour with more hot water. The cream will be white and velvety. Read a webber towel to the face several times for several minutes. Rub this cream on the entire face. Then wipe off with a wet cloth. Repeat the process again at night. Any good drugist will let you have a tin for about fifty cents.

PYLLIS.—The following hair remover is almost magic. There is nothing like it that I know of.

Get a good drug store one ounce of simple salicylic solution. It will cost you one dollar, but it will last you quite a while. Apply the solution freely with the finger tips on the hair you want removed. Keep the hair moist with it until it has actually dissolved. This will take but two or three minutes. Then wipe off with a warm, damp cloth and wash the skin with warm water. Then apply the treatment given to "Wondering."

MADAME X.—A difference in appearance of ten years in age is the frequent report I receive in my mail as a result of the following white conditioner.

In a large bowl pour half a pint of hot water. Place this bowl in a pan of water on a slow fire. Add two ounces of opal and continue stirring until all is dissolved. At first it will look like jelly, then it will start to cream. When it does this, remove from the fire and slowly add two tablespoonfuls of glycerine, and stir constantly until cool. Keep in a tight jar. You should be able to get rid of any good drug store, and it should not cost you more than fifty cents.

Apply this cream very liberally every morning with the tips of the fingers, after washing your face. Rub well into the skin until the cream has disappeared.

This cream will grow your hair. If it is on thick, the more the better.

CHATS WITH THINKING WOMEN

by Barbara Boyd

The Brave Girl Breadwinner

DON'T you think it is about time that a little more credit, and considerably more appreciation, be given the woman who supports a home?

Think over the people you know. Can't you count dozens, perhaps scores of homes, where the chief breadwinner is a woman; often a slim young girl who should be enjoying carefree girlhood, but who, instead, is standing valiantly at the door of the family domicile and keeping the wolf at bay?

Some one who likes to delve among statistics has been hunting up the facts of the matter. And to one son who is supporting his mother, he found dozens of daughters doing the same work.

Yet though we can all look about us and see this condition everywhere under our eyes, how seldom do we give the daughter any particular credit for what she is doing?

When a son devotes his life supporting his mother, we speak of it in awed tones. He is pointed out as an object of interest and the general chorus goes up, "He's awfully good to his mother," and praise never ceases to fall upon his head.

But when a daughter does exactly the same thing, nothing is ever said about it. It is looked upon as the natural thing for her to do. And we all know, that where there is one son and one daughter, it is considered perfectly natural for the son to marry and set up his own establishment regardless of how his mother will fare, but that if the daughter marries, the mother is expected to make her home with her.

Yet a daughter has her ambitions, her dreams she wants to realize, quite as much as her brother. To support her mother or others of the family, she often has to sacrifice wishes as dear to her as any that a man may cherish. And it is to her credit that she does put them so unselfishly aside, and stand valiantly by those who need her. The world is full of these self-sacrificing women who have reached middle life with nothing accomplished, because all their time and strength and ability have gone to support the family; while the son and brother have gone scot free, or contributed only as his inclination prompted, because, well, just because he is a man.

These women who are putting aside their own wishes and ambitions in order to support others are a noble band. Let us give them the credit and appreciation due them. Let us rank them just as highly as the man who is supporting a family. Let us show that we understand and appreciate the sacrifice that is being made, the ambitions that are being laid aside, in order that the duty at hand may be done.

A WOMAN'S OBSERVATIONS

Edna K. Wooley

In a morning paper appeared a letter written by a man who declares that he is a German with an American wife. He comments on the high cost of living thusly:

"I do not kick, and why? Because I know how to live cheaply. Everybody who kicks about the H. C. of L. is wrong because people do not practice economy."

"I have an American wife and I never let her do the buying or cooking because as an American she does not know what economy means and does not know how to cook to please the palate. So, under my direction, there isn't a family that lives cheaper than we do. We do not spend more than 25 cents a day for three meals. I am willing to fix up a nice meal for anyone and at the end see him go away satisfied. The whole meal would not cost more than a nickel."

"Since meat got so high I stopped eating it and am strong and healthy just the same."

"I pity the poor kicker born in America, where economy is unknown. I do not hear other nationalities kick, because they all come from countries where economy is their first lesson. I told my wife one day to cook some rice and not cook it too much. When I came home I didn't make out what I had on my plate—rice or flour. But she isn't German—she is American and a sufferer!"

Who wouldn't be a sufferer with that kind of a husband? As for the foreign-born not kicking about the high cost of living—how about the meat and bread riots that occur in the foreign districts of our cities?

It may be true that the foreign-born know better how to economize in some ways than the Americans. Nevertheless they eat the good things to be found in the land of America. When the foreign-born wife of a foreign-born laborer cooks steak twice a day for her family, and complains because the American mistress for whom she washes doesn't furnish her with chicken or chops at the noonday meal, one is inclined to think that the American isn't getting the best of it in some way.

Moreover, in districts where Americans live, retailers put up prices. In foreign districts meats and all food supplies can be bought very much cheaper.

Perhaps the American hasn't learned the fine art of economy in all its details, but he and his wife certainly have a better time and a higher pride than many who spend less and save more.

It is doubtful if there are many

CHARMS OF "BUNTY" ARE MOST ENGAGING

Graham Moffet's Scotch Comedy Presented by Star Cast in Treat of Theatrical Season.

With its clever characterizations, its quaint and homely touches of Scotch humor, and its delightful simplicity and realism, Graham Moffet's "Bunty Philis the Strangers," as presented by the original Chicago cast at the Myers theatre last evening captivated all with its rare and engaging charm.

It is a comedy in the true sense of the word for the play leaves a pleasant impression, a sense of good-humor and a keen realization of delightful qualities of character carefully and subtly portrayed. It can truly be said that "Bunty" is different from the ordinary comedy for it is not the uproarious, boisterous sort, but rather a play which gives a cherry happy picture of a typical Scotch home in which there are trials and tribulations which are finally dispelled by the clever management of the sweetly dominating "Bunty."

From the moment that the curtain rises on the home life of Tammas Biggar, the exacting Scotch father an elder in the kirk, to the final clearing up of the vexatious problems which confront the family on that eventful Sunday and Monday by the capable and charming "Bunty," the audience is held in closest attention. It is not so much the story which is simple, amounting merely to a succession of events, but the skillful presentation of character, rich in human qualities, which holds one's interest so effectively.

It would be scarcely possible to say too much in the way of appreciation of the members of the cast which presented the play. It need only be said that they were the players who had such a successful run at the Princess theatre in Chicago last season, that they are fresh from a week's engagement at the Shubert theatre, Milwaukee, and that their appearance was one of the first one night's stands to know that there could be no better cast secured.

Molly McIntyre in the role of Bunty the purposeful Scotch lassie, whose managing abilities made all bow to her will, was at once a winning favorite. Even her obstinate father, a part taken most capably by Nelson Ramsey, was compelled to make his plans as her dictation, and only through her clever efforts was he saved from the designing old maid, Susie Simpson, which was played by Jean Burnett. The latter role was one of the most difficult in the play and Miss Burnett was equal to its demands at every turn. Her air of grim determination was carried out in her every movement and expression.

William Lennox in the part of Weelum, Bunty's betrothed, was another artist. A most exemplary young man, he realized his responsibilities as a newly elected elder, and he plainly showed his need of the reliable, Bunty in a crisis. Mr. Lennox's portrayal of the utter dejection alternated by joyous hope evinced by Weelum in the last act when he comes decisively under Bunty's will in regard to their coming marriage, was especially noteworthy.

Neil McNeil as Rab, Carrie Lee Stoyke as Eileen Dunlop, and Lenore Phelps as Teenie, as well as W. H. Rotherham, the minister's man, were the other characters of importance. They played with the same artistic feeling that characterized the principals. The costumes and staging were all harmonious with attention to detail. Every possible effort has been made to secure a true interpretation of this delightful Scotch play.

SIDEWALK SKETCHES.

WHY WHO'S WHO.

(By Howard L. Rann.)

WHEN the tooth of time removed the hirsute adornment from the lofty dome of William Jennings Bryan, the aforesaid tooth spoiled a great Brutus. As we recall it, Brutus was in the full possession of his hair at the time he handed the late Julius Caesar a wallop under the fifth rib at the foot of Pompey's pillar. Whoever heard of a bald-headed Brutus?

Bryan and Brutus is a difference, however. Brutus never ran for office but once. His method of getting elected was to stab the opposing candidate with a short Roman sword and then wait for a spontaneous uprising of the plain people. He never tried this but once, as the plain people rose the wrong way.

Mr. Bryan uses a different system. His idea is that no one should resist the call of duty, no matter if it is a trifle faint and weary. He heard this call three times and was about to detect it for a fourth, but by the time it reached Baltimore it was too exhausted to speak out loud, let alone trying to sound a lusty tocsin.

Mr. Bryan is an authority on tocsins, by the way. He has tried several, but has never secured a good fit. He claims to have had a number of his best tocsins stolen by other candidates, and thus has impregnated him with bitterness and falling hair. He would no sooner get out a new tocsin which looked good for several electoral votes than somebody would come along and weave it into a platform upholding the robber tariff and ship subsidies. It is no wonder that Mr. Bryan has to wear a skull cap during fly time.

Between campaigns Mr. Bryan tells the nation where to head in through the throbbing columns of a weekly paper. This paper has a large circulation, collected in advantage, and carries no liquor advertising. In fact, it advertises nobody to any extent except the peerless leader.

In the present campaign Mr. Bryan is supporting Governor Wilson with great unanimity. His enthusiasm, however, has not started any confagurations anywhere, but it is believed he will warm up.

HUMOROUS ACCOUNT OF BOATING PARTY

Levi K. Alden Writes of Trip of Former Janesville People Down Crystal River in Boats.

Wisconsin Veterans' Home, September 15, 1912.

To the Editor:

By way of a variety, a party from the Home and some campers made the trip down the Crystal river last Friday. The ex-Janesvillians in the excursion were Mr. and Mrs. Simon Bunge, Mr. and Mrs. John Stevens, Charles D. Stevens and the writer, the latter two without any encomprance. Mrs. Bunge acted as chaperone. One large rowboat and five canoes made up the fleet.

Crystal river is about the crookedest and swiftest stream I ever saw. The distance from the mouth to where it empties into the Waupaca river near the city, by land is about five miles, but by water it is all of forty miles. It is a shallow stream and full of headwinds, and in most places it is as swift as Rock river below the dam at Monterey.

By reason of his four years' service in the 12th Wisconsin, Mr. Bunge was put in charge of the fleet, and it goes without saying that he filled the bill to perfection. I do not believe there was a stone from the mouth to the outlet that we did not strike. It was a trip that all the participants will remember as long as they live. There are several falls or rapids along the route, each one just a little harder to go through than its predecessor. Then there are three dams to get over as best we could. When it came to portaging the canoes had the advantage of us in the rowboat, but in the rapids the rowboat was the old reliable. At the dam at Peshperville the citizens warned us that we could not get over without carrying our boats, but we thought different, and that was the cause of our downfall.

The women folks would not chance the "shoot," but the first two canoes went over like ducks, and then we tied the rowboat to the dam and went in the stern and about half way down we struck a broken plank and the boat went end over end through the breakers. The last we saw of Bunge he was flying through the air and landed in about five feet of water near the shore. The rest of us went over with the boat and got a good wetting. I don't believe I ever saw water quite as wet as that in Crystal river.

We lost two canoes at Peshperville and had to double up for the rest of the trip. At noon we had in the two miles by land and about twenty by water. We took dinner at Little Hope. We had little hope of getting much farther as the rocks and rapids were becoming more numerous, but we had started for Waupaca and to Waupaca we were bent on going.

A little farther down stream our boat got tangled up in a barbed wire fence, and Mrs. Bunge got so mixed up with the barbs that it took the entire male outfit to get her out, and between the water and the barbs she was a sight, too.

Mr. and Mrs. Stevens were in a canoe by themselves, and while they were laughing at us their canoe struck a rock and tipped them into the river and they had to chase their boat half a mile to catch it.

About two o'clock we came to a road that led to the Home and as a farmer was going right by there we shipped the women folks home and we kept on our way. Just before five o'clock we found good sailing and made the rest of the way on schedule time. At the Waupaca river we found teams waiting to take our boats home.

In counting the costs we found two canoes so crippled that they were abandoned and the rest of them so badly used up that they were hardly worth bringing home. It was lots of fun but I think if I ever attempt the trip again I will take a bathing suit and swim for it.

The Home was visited last Sunday by an excursion from Stevens Point. They were accompanied by a brass band of about forty pieces, and they gave us a grand concert in the evening.

Farmers are just beginning to harvest their potatoes and are selling them at 25 and 30 cents per bushel. The yield is exceptionally good, some of the fields running between 250 and 300 bushels to the acre. Corn cutting is also well under way and the farmers are harvesting the best crop they have had in years.

Buford's back was against the light, and, for the first moment she only saw him as a tall masculine outline and her smile was frank and natural. But he saw her plain as a picture and before Dominick could frame the words of introduction, started forward, crying:

"Bernice Iverson!"

She drew back as if struck and made a movement to drag the portiere over her. Her face went white to the lips, the patches of rouge standing out on her cheeks like rose-leaves pasted on the sickly skin.

"Who—what's that?" she stammered, turning a wild eye on Dominick.

"Mr. Ryan," the actor cried, beside himself with excitement, "this is my wife! This is the woman I've been talking of! Bernice, don't you know me? Junius Carter?"

"He's crazy," she faltered, her lips so loose and tremulous they could hardly form the words. "I never saw him before. I don't know what he's talking about. Who's Junius Carter?"

"This is my wife, Mr. Buford," said Dominick, who had been staring from one to the other in blank astonishment. "We've been married nearly three years. I don't understand—"

"It's Bernice Iverson, the girl I married in Chicago, that I've been telling you about, that I saw last night at the Mexican restaurant. Why, she can't deny it. She can't look at me and say she doesn't know me—Junius Carter, the man she married in the Methodist chapel, seven years ago, in Chicago, Bernice—"

He approached her and she shrank back.

"Keep away from me," she cried hoarsely, stretching out a trembling hand. "I don't know what you're talking about. You're crazy. Junius Carter's dead—" then suddenly turning on Dominick with a blazing look of fury—"It's you that have done this! It's you, you snake! I'll be even with you yet!"

She tore herself out of the folds of the portiere which she had clutched to her and rushed into the hall and into her own room. The banging of the door behind her shook the house.

The two men stood as she had left them, staring at each other, not knowing what to say, speechless and aghast.

CHAPTER XXI.

The Last Interview.

The night was falling when Buford left. He and Dominick had sat on in the den, talking together in low voices,

"Keep Away From Me," She Cried Hoarsely.

going over past events in the concatenation of circumstances that had led up to the extraordinary situation in which they now found themselves. Both listened with strained ears for the opening of Bernice's door, but not a sound came from her room. Each silently, without expressing his thoughts to the other, wondered what she would do, what sensational move might now be expected of her. While they talked, it was evident she intended to make no sign of life.

After Buford had left, Dominick called up his friend on the telephone telling him that he would be unable to meet him at dinner. He knew that Bernice could hear every word he uttered, and with indescribable dread he expected that she would open her door and accost him. But again she preserved an inviolate invisibility, though beneath her portal he could see a crack of light and could hear her moving about in the room.

He went into his own room, lit the gas, and began packing his trunks. He was dazed and stupefied by what had occurred, and almost the only clearly-defined idea he had was to leave the house and get far from the presence of the woman who had so ruthlessly poisoned his life. He was in the midst of his packing when the Chinaman summoned him to dinner, but he told the man he cared for nothing and would want no breakfast on the following morning. The servant, who by this time was well aware that the household was a strange one, shrugged his shoulders without comment and passed on to the door of his mistress's room, upon which he knocked with the low, deferential rap of the Chinese domestic. Bernie's voice sounded shrilly, through the silence of the flat:

"Go away! Let me alone! It's that dinner I don't want any."

The sound of her voice pierced Dominick with a sense of loathing and horror. He stopped in his packing, suddenly deciding to leave everything and go, go from the house and from her as soon as he could get away. He thrust into a valise such articles as he would want for the night and set the bag by the stair-head while he went into the parlor to find some bills and letters of his that he remembered to have left in the desk. As he passed Bernie's door, it flew open and she appeared in the aperture. The room behind her was a blaze of light, and every gas-jet lit and pouring a flood of radiance over the clothes outspread on the bed, the chairs, and the floor. She, herself, in a lace-trimmed petticoat and loose silk dressing-sack, stood in the doorway staring at Dominick, her face pinched, white, and fierce.

"What are you doing?" she said abruptly. "Going away?"

"Yes," he answered, stopping at the sight of the dreaded apparition. "That's my intention."

"Where are you going?" she demanded.

He gave her a cold look and made no answer.

"Are you going to your mother's?" she cried.

He moved forward toward the parlor door and she came out into the passage, looking after him and repeating, with a tremulous, hoarse persistence, "Dominick, answer me. Are you going to your mother's?"

"Yes, I am," he said over his shoulder.

He had an unutterable dread that she would begin to speak of the situation of Buford, of her past life; that she would try to explain and exonerate herself and they would be plunged into a long and profitless discussion of all the sickening, irremediable wretchedness of the past. He could not bear the thought of it; he would have done anything to avoid it. He wanted to escape from her, from the house where she had tortured him, where he seemed to have laid down his manhood, his honor, his faith, and seen her trample on them. The natural supposition that he would want to confront her with her deception and hear her explanation was the last thing he desired doing.

"Don't go to your mother's," she cried, following him up the hall, "for to-night, Dominick, please. And don't tell her. I beg, I pray of you, don't tell her till to-morrow."

Her manner was so pleading, so imploringly insistent, that he turned and looked somberly at her. She was evidently deeply in earnest, her face lined with anxiety.

"This is the last thing I'll ever ask of you. I know I've got no right to ask anything, but you're generous, you've been kind to me in the past, and I'll not cost you much to be kind just once again. Go to a hotel, or the club, or anywhere you like, but not to your mother's and don't tell her till to-morrow afternoon."

He stared at her without speaking, wishing she would be silent and leave him.

"I'll not trouble you after to-morrow. I'll go. I'll get out. You'll never be bothered by me any more."

"All right," he said, "I'll go to the club. Let me alone, that's all, and let me go."

"And—and," she persisted, "you won't tell her till to-morrow, tomorrow afternoon?"

He had entered the parlor in which the Chinaman had lit the lamps, and opening the desk began hunting for his papers. To her last words he returned no answer, and she crept in after him and stood in the doorway, leaning against the woodwork of the door-frame.

"You won't tell her till to-morrow—to-morrow, say, after three?"

He found the letters and drew them out of their pigeonhole.

"All right," he almost shouted. "I won't tell her. But, for God's sake, leave me alone and let me go. If you keep on following me round this way I won't answer for what I'll do."

"You promise then," she said, ignoring his heat. "You promise you'll not tell her till after three?"

He turned from the desk, gave her a look of restrained passion, and said, "I promise," then passed by her as she stood in the doorway and walked to the stair-head. Here his valise stood, and snatching it up he ran down the stairs and out of the house.

Bernie, hearing the door shut, returned to her room and went on with the work of sorting her wardrobe and packing her trunks. She did it deliberately and carefully, looking over each garment, and folding the choicer articles between sheets of tissue paper. At midnight she had not yet finished, and under the blaze of the gases, looking very tired, she went on smoothing skirts and pinching up the lace on bodices as she laid them tenderly on the trays that stood on the bed, the table, and the sofa. The night was far spent before everything was arranged to her satisfaction and she went to bed.

She was up betimes in the morning. Eight o'clock had not struck when she was making a last tour of the parlor, picking up small articles of silver and glass that she crowded down into cracks in the tightly-packed trunks. At breakfast the Chinaman, an oblique, observant eye on her, asked her what he should prepare for lunch. Conscious that if she told him she would not be back he might become alarmed at the general desertion and demand his wages, she ordered an even more elaborate menu than usual, telling him she would bring home a friend.

She breakfasted in her wrapper and after the meal finished her toilet with the extreme solicitude. Never had she taken more pains with herself. Though anxiety and strain had thinned and sharpened her, the fever of excitement which burnt in her temporarily repaired these ravages. Her eyes were brilliant without artificial aid; her cheeks a hot dry crimson that needed no rouge. The innate practicality of her character asserted itself even in this harassed hour. Last night she had put the purple orchid in a glass of water on the bureau. Now, as she pinned it on her breast, she congratulated herself for her foresight, the pale lavender petals of the rare blossom tinging altogether harmoniously with her dress of dark purple cloth.

Before she left the room she locked the trunks and left beside them a dress suit-case packed for a journey. Standing in the doorway she took a hurried look about the apartment—a last, farewell survey, not of sentiment but of investigation, to see if she had forgotten anything. A silver photograph frame set in rhinestones caught her eye and she went back and took it up, weighing it uncertainly in her hand. Some of the rhinestones had fallen out, and finally decided it was not worth while opening the trunks to put in such a damaged article.

It was only a quarter past nine when she emerged from the flat. She took the down-town car and twenty minutes later was mounting the steps to Bill Cannon's office. She had been motionless and rigidly preoccupied on the car, but, as she approached the office, a change was visible in her gait and mien. She moved with a light, perky assurance, a motion as of a delicate, triumphant buoyancy seeming to impart itself to her whole body from her shoulders to her feet.

A slight, mild smile settled on her lips, suggesting gaiety tempered with good humor. Her eye was charged with the same expression rendered more piquant by a gleam—the merest suggestion—of coquettish challenge.

The Bonanza King was already in his office. The same obsequious clerk who had shown her in on a former occasion took her card in to the inner sanctum where the great man, even at this early hour, was shut away with the business which occupied his crowded days. In a moment the young man returned smiling and quite as murmuringly polite as he had been on her former visit, and Bernie was once again ushered into the presence of the enemy.

The old man had read the name on the card with a lowering glance. His command to admit the visitor had been hardly more than an inarticulate growl which the well-trained clerk understood, as those about deaf mutes can read their half-made signs. Cannon was not entirely surprised at her reappearance, and mingled feelings stirred in him as he turned his swivel chair away from the table, and sat hunched in it, his elbows on his arms, his hands clasped over his stomach.

She came in with an effect of dash, confidence, and brilliancy that astonished him. He had expected her almost to siddle in in obvious, guilty, fear of him, her resistance broken, humbly coming to see for the money. Instead, a rustling, scented apparition appeared in the doorway, more gracious, handsome, and smiling than he had ever thought she could be. She stood for a moment, as if waiting for his invitation to enter, the whole effect of her rich costume, her feverish high coloring, and her debonaire and self-confident demeanor, surprising him into silence. A long white feather on her hat made a background for her darkly-flushed face and Auburn hair. There were some amethysts round her neck, their purple lights harmonizing richly with the superb flower pinned on her breast. Her eyes looked very black, laughing, and provocative through her spotted veil.

"Well," she said in a gay voice, "here I am again! Is it a surprise?"

She advanced into the room, and the old man, almost unconsciously, rose from his chair.

"Yes, sort of," he said, dryly.

She stopped by the desk, looked at him sideways, and said:

"Do we shake hands?"

His glance on her was hard and cold. Bernie met it and could not restrain a sinking of the courage that was her most admirable characteristic and that she had screwed far past its ordinary sticking-point that morning. She sank down into the same armchair that she had occupied on her former visit and said, with a little languid effect of indifference:

"Oh, well, never mind. We don't have to waste time being polite. That's one of the most convenient things about our interview. We just say what we really think and there's no need bothering about humbug."

"So glad to hear it," said the old man with his most ironical air. "Suppose then you let me know what you've come down to say."

"Can't you guess?" she answered, with an expression that was almost one of flirtatious interrogation.

"Nup," he answered, looking steadily at her. "I have to have it said in that plain style with no politeness that you say is the way we always talk."

THEY ALL DEMAND IT

Janesville, Like Every City and Town in the Union, Receives It.

People with kidney ills want to be cured. When one suffers the tortures of an aching back, relief is eagerly sought for. There are many remedies today that relieve, but do not cure. Doan's Kidney Pills have cured thousands. Here is proof:

Bird Leffingwell, 620 Hackett St., Beloit, Wis., says: "I began using Doan's Kidney Pills about ten years ago and obtained the most satisfactory results. At that time I had an attack of backache, which clung to me persistently, and gradually grew worse. I finally found that my kidneys were weak and accordingly procured a box of Doan's Kidney Pills. In a short time the kidneys were restored to their normal condition and I felt like my old self again. Recently when my kidneys were disordered, I used Doan's Kidney Pills and I again received the desired results. I hope that other sufferers of kidney complaint will give Doan's Kidney Pills a trial."

True Honesty.

"To be honest is more than to refrain from stealing another man's purse, more than paying the exact number of dollars you owe. Honesty means far more than not defrauding other people financially. It means nothing less than not defrauding yourself by your own prejudices and judgments. It means dealing fairly and squarely with yourself; looking at yourself with the same eyes with which you dissect the conduct of your associates."—Clara K. Bayliss.
